

Internet consultation by Dutch Government - Taxation on aviation

The previous ticket tax in the Netherlands has shown that posing a national tax on air travel will lead to an increase of transport by road or rail of (business) travellers to foreign airports such as Liège, Brussels, Dusseldorf and Frankfurt. Therefore a national tax will not generate environmental benefits and may cause damage to export opportunities for Dutch entrepreneurs, the business climate and employment.

The NATM supports the European Collaboration variant in order to maintain the level playing field within Europe. A national tax only causes a shift of flight movements abroad and, according to research by CE Delft, hardly yields any environmental benefits. The introduction of this national tax will not create awareness in the business sector for more sustainable travel.

To make sustainable (business) air travel more successful this national tax should be refunded to;

- a) the airlines and/or its biofuel distributors to cover the cost for the more expensive biofuel and to help innovation by bringing the production of biofuel to a lower level of production cost; or
- b) the business community and the private traveller to compensate for the higher costs for (business) travel when supporting sustainable air travel.

The national tax should not be used for other purposes than any effort to support and drive sustainable (business) air travel financially to a next level.

As this is not the starting point of the Dutch government, NATM does not support this option but will continue to give its support to the European approach via its EU lobby by means of the GBTA Advocacy lobby group.

The NATM is open for reflection on any topic related to the impact of business travel on behalf of its corporate members in the Netherlands.

GBTA (Europe) Advocacy | Global Business Travel Association

GBTA advocates for policies that improve the business travel industry, representing travel buyers and the travellers they manage. Business travellers are a consistently underrepresented constituency, despite the fact that the business travel industry represents $1.3 trillion in business travel and meetings expenditures annually. Business travel is also a major driver for jobs and the economy. With more than 12,000 global members, regional partners, 39 local chapters and affiliates, and a network of 30,000 business travel and meetings professionals, GBTA is the voice of the global business travel industry. GBTA actively speaks out on policy issues across the globe and frequently meets with representatives in Washington, D.C. and Brussels [GBTA Europe] in an effort to advance the business travel industry.
